

Cellular telephone use onboard an aircraft while in flight or on the taxi way will be a headache no one will want to deal with. Consumers are obviously willing to put phone calls ahead of safety, i.e., driving while talking, and chatting onboard the aircraft is no different. The possibility of air rage is obvious. The airline industry has enough challenges without this. Some people actually look forward to two hours without being available. Using cell phones on board must not be permitted.